Celebrates 92nd Birthday

A buffet supper was held on Tuesday evening, November 28th, in honor of Mr. John Marshall Ferguson on his 92nd birthday. Mr. and Mrs. Norman Ferguson were host and hostess for the occasion which was held at the American Legion Hall.

A large number of friends, relatives and neighbors gathered to honor him on this occasion.

Lime For High Crop Yields

A favorable soil pH is essential if high crop yields are to be obtained. A low pH will limit yields even through nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium have been adequately applied. Many of the soils in the southeastern United States are acid in the plow layer and soil acidity increases with depth. It is not difficult to raise the pH of the plow layer, but it is impractical to raise the pH of the subsoil.

Benefits from liming, other than a mere reduction in soil acidity, result when dolomitic limestone is applied. Two major plant nutrients calcium and magnesium are added to the soil.

Liming also influences the availability of many compounds in the soil. The availability of boron, copper, iron manganese and zinc decreases as the pH increases. The availability of molybdenum and phosphorus increases with increased pH.

An example of the response of corn to lime is shown in the picture below. The soil type is Tatum silt loam, and the location is Orange, Virginia. The entire area received the same kind and amount of fertilizer, but only a part of the area was limed. The pH on the limed area is about 6.4 while that on the unlimed area is about 4.9.

The work is being conducted to determine the response of corn to lime and to ascertain if certain varieties of corn can produce satisfactory yields on soils with acid surface and subsoil layers. It has been shown that certain varieties of barley and wheat can withstand greater acidity than certain other varieties. The selection or development of a corn variety or varieties that can tolerate high subsoil acidity would appear to be of considerable economic importance to farmers in Virginia and elsewhere.

In an effort to determine if certain corn varieties may possess the ability to tolerate high acidity, 65 lines were evaluated in field experiments at Orange in 1971. In 1972, 22 of the most promising lines were further evaluated in field experiments. Yields in 1972 have not been determined but certain lines are showing promise.

The work is being conducted by J. A. Lutz, Jr., C. F. Genter, G. W. Hawkins and G. D. Jones.

Homemaker Hints

by Rebecca M. Johnson, Extension Agent

Does your recipe call for self rising flour, when all you have is the regular type? Make your own, by adding 1½ teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt to each cup of flour.

Self-rising flour was one of our earliest convenience foods, developed by a miller over a century ago to help simplify daily biscuit making.

How do your biscuits rate? They should be light, flaky, and slightly moist inside. The biscuit should double in size during baking. A light and gentle touch in mixing and handling the dough is the secret of good biscuits.

Muffins should be rounded on top with a slightly pebbly surface. The inside should be moist, tender and light. When making muffins, thoroughly blend all the liquid ingredients, then add all at once to the flour mixture. Stir only until the dry ingredients are moistened; the batter should be lumpy.

Almost anything can be added to your muffin batter. Let your imagination and your family's preference be your guide. Try adding fruits, nuts, herbs, cheese, chopped meats, or spices. Combine these with the dry ingredients before mixing with the liquid to prevent them from sticking to the bottom.

Serve your basic biscuits at breakfast, lunch or dinner. Dress them up with strawberries or other fruit for an old-fashion shortcake. Use the biscuit dough as topping on your casserole, or as dumplings. Add herbs, spices, or other seasonings and cut the dough in various shapes and sizes, for appetizers or snacks.
